COMPOSITION OF SKIM MILK

Guernsey Milk, Like That of Jersey, Has High Percentage of Protein and Sugar.

Heretofore the difference between the percentage of butterfat in Jersey cows' milk and that of Holstein's has been often emphasized. Only recently has the fact been known that there is considerable difference in protein.

Chemical analyses made by A. E. Perkins, dairy chemist at the Ohio experiment station, show that milk from Jersey cows has a higher percentage of protein and sugar than Holstein to that of the Jersey, while Ayrshire milk is intermediate between that of these two breeds and the Holstein.

These analyses indicate that the percentage of protein in milk increases with the fat content, but not in pro- seen at PLANTERS HDW. CO. portion. Skim milk from Holstein milk having 3.3 per cent fat contained 3.5 per cent protein, while Jersey milk tested 4.7 per cent fat and 4.1 per cent protein. The variation in the sugar content showed a similar tendency. Thus the fat content of milk offers a practical basis to compute the composition of skim milk derived from it.

The Gentleman. The gentleman is never unduly familiar; takes no liberties; is chary of questions; is neither artificial nor affected; is as little obtrusive upon the mind or feelings of others as on their persons; bears himself tenderly toward the weak and unprotected; is not arrogant, cannot be supercillous; can be self-denying without struggle; is not vain of his advantages, extrinsic or personal; habitually subordinates his lower to his higher self; is, in his best condition, electric with truth, buoyant with veracity. Gentlemanhood is not compassed by imita-tion, because inward life is not imitable; nor is it purchasable, because refinement cannot be bought; nor but partially inheritable, because nature ances monopolies. It is not erficial, its externals being the ments part and parcel of its sub-stances.—George Henry Colvert,

That New Suit.

"What am I going to do about that new suit I must have?" said Martha Weaver to her husband as he came in from work one evening.

"Why is there any question about that? Go to Hopkins & Co. and get what you need. If you need a suit get it." answered her husband.

"I have looked there," replied Martha, "but they haven't anything that I want. I just need a simple suit. but I want good material, and it must be neatly and well made, one that I could use for almost any occasion. I would prefer a ready made suit, but those that Hopkins & Co. have appear to be made of poor, flimsy material, and they are decked out with such cheap, flashy, dowdy trimming that I just cannot bear to wear them," replied Martha.

The False Step. "Well, what do you want to do-run into the city and get you a suit?" asked John.

"No. That does not suit me either, for when I have to pay my fare, my hotel bill and other incidental expenses it makes the cost too high and also takes more time than I can spare for the purchase of one suit," said Martha.

"Could you not order one? Didn't I see some mail order catalogues around here awhile ago?" asked the interested Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The longer Martha bad the suit the more numerous and pronounced be came its defects, until at last her pride rebelled, and she refused longer to wear the miserable parody. She said she would much prefer to wear a "good" old suit than a "poor" new one. For with the poor new one she was conscious and ashamed when she felt any one looking at her or her suit.

Mr. and Mrs. Weaver held a con sultation, after which Mrs. Weaver de clared that never again in her life would she buy anything from a pic ture or from a catalogue house.

What Can a Boy Do?

The industrial manager has failed often to recognize that the most difficult of all educational problems is to find out what a boy is fitted for. If the college could be sure of the boy's capabilities, and if there could be any assurance that the requirements of the industrial field would be permanent, specialized instruction could be greatly extended. So long, however, as our knowledge of human beings remains as limited as it is at present, and so long as industrial conditions remain as kaleidoscopic as they are, the college owes it to its students to see that their training is such that, should they find themselves out of a position either because of inaptitude in one line or because of changed industrial conditions. they will have an educational foundation broad enough to build upon anew. -Dexter S. KILLING THE LOVE STUFF

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

All the week Sylvia had buried her nose in the papers on her desk, all the week she had read and sorted and blue-penciled and dictated amidst the roaring of 50 typewriters and the shrilling of the telephones. A fiction high noon in the parlors of editor under such circumstances is likely to get stalled on romance.

"Love, love, love, it's always love," she declared with disgust. "I get so sick of this everlasting stuff! I think I'll scream if someone isn't murdered soon or the hero doesn't die before his time. But I have to throw them out if they're not dripping with love for hat's what the public demands.

No one heard these sentiments for e roaring and shrilling went on unceasingly, drowning almost every other sound. Even Brilles, the hard-hearted managing editor on the other side of the big room was adding to the pandemonium by forcibly calling down a cub for missing a big thing he was sent to cover the night before.

"I think," she mused, as she put on her hat and jacket and hooked up her furs, "that I can't accept any more stories from Treador Vane. The slush getting so thick I can't wade through. Sometime I'll put it up to Brilles. He's about as romantic and unbendable as a plate-glass window, but not," she glanced over at him quizzically, "so transparent. A regular sphinx, I should say."

She reached the street, a narrow canyon between the high cliffs of build-She was greatly surprised that the cold, drizzling rain that was falling at noon had stopped and that the thermometer had not only fallen 25 degrees, but that a wind, biting and strong, was tearing down the street and freezing everything as it went. Pedestrians were groping their way along, keeping close to the wall for safety, but it was hazardous business.

Sylvia watched a moment from the haven of the vestibule. She had three squares to go for her car. Then she had a happy thought. Up in the lockerroom she had a pair of skates.

When she went through the big room Brilles was still at his desk-Kentucky Regiment and Miss Ruby Brilles, the flintlike, the heartless, the much-to-be-feared.

Sylvia stopped beside him. He turned in his swivel chair and regarded her silently, running his eyes over her slim, girlish figure in its brown

"What is it?" he asked quite gently. "I want to ask you if you don't think we're running too much sentiment in the story column. Twe been keeping everything with love in it, and returning hundreds of ripping good stories just because the hero forgot to kiss his girl or the parson refused to marry the old maid. I thought I'd ask your opinion. How would it do to run in an occasional good one on another theme? All this love stuff is just a dream," "Is it?"

"Yes you know it as well as I do. But the public is queer. They're crazy about one Treador Vane. I personally wouldn't give his truck room Brilles tapped his desk a minute thoughtfully. "Look here, Miss Hunter, you're here to run that column, held a position with C. R. Clark & so do as you please about ft. I've read agree with you. You're right about the love business, too. Even the girls nowadays don't know what it means. Business or something has taken all the romance out of them. You're a Sylvia started and remembered her own summing up of the managing editor. Certainly the verdict was mutual. "It's a bad night and I'm getting my skates," she said as she left. "I'm going to skate to the car on the pave-

But as she glided over the slippery street she decided not to take the car. Crossing a street, Sylvia collided with a man. They went down together in a heap.

"Miss Hunter!" cried he springing

"Mr. Brilles," exclaimed Sylvia.

"Are you hurt?" "Not a bit."

But when Sylvia get to her feet with his help she turned pale. "I be-heve I've twisted my foot," she said. "Oh, that's too bad! Can you bear your weight on it at all?"
"Yes, if I don't move ft."

Then I'll tow you home. How far

"About four squares." When they reached her door she insisted that he come in. "You haven't had dinner, have you?" she asked. "No," he admitted.

"Then you must share ours," she in-So Builles, the flinted-hearted, stayed and spent the evening. The next morning the pretty editor laid a page from a note book on his desk in the office. "I found this on the floor!" she smiled teasingly.

Mr. Brilles took it and turned a guilty red. It was a page of notes with Treador Vane's name at the top. "I'm guilty of those awful stories!"

"It's hard to connect you with sentiment," she smiled, "but I've decided to keep the stories on, I thought I'd tell

"But you inspired them," he answered quickly. "May I come again she said gently.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces,

One of The Best

The NEW SEED LAW requiring all packages of GARDEN and FIELD SEED to be marked or labeled showing the year packed and percentage of generation is one of the best laws enacted for the protection and good of all the people (honest seed growers included.)

You should see that all seeds you buy fully comply with same. Laws are not enacted to avenge a crime but to prevent same from being committed. Not to work a hardship on any one but to help all society. There may be greater crimes than selling bad seeds, but there is nothing more disappointing than a crop failure, caused by planting bad seed. You lose not only the time and labor in preparing the soil but the prospects in a crop as well. The high cost of living now is partly due to such conditions and if you BUY SEEDS that do NOT FULLY COMPLY with this NEW LAW YOU YOU ARE A PARTY TO the CAUSE of THIS CROP FAILURE.

WE ARE GLAD TO STATE THAT

ALL SEEDS OFFERED BY US

Dear Mr. Schubert:

The Great Violin Virtuoso. Chicago.

Dear Mr. Schubert:

I feel I must write and tell you how glad I was to play in Nashville again after so many years, and how astonished I was to notice the great improvements as to the artistic musical life to which I am sure you have greatly contributed by the influence of your school, which is founded on the best principles that will certainly increase the musical atmosphere. I was so pleased to have met some of your colleagues who help you in your undertaking for the benefit of the art, at the same time let me express my very best thanks tor the trouble you have taken during the evening to accompany me in the way you did.

Hoping to have the pleasure of playing with you again very soon, with kindest regards, believe me,

Yours very truly,

New York.

Dear Mr. Schubert:

I desire to express my appreciation of your very great kindness to me while I was in your city. I wish, also, to tell you the esteem in which I hold you as a musician. Nashville should be proud indeed to have as its benefactor a musician of your native ability, industry and progressiveness. This country needs just such talented and straight-forward men as you to bring about the spirit of musical enthusiasm, and the so-called "musical atmosphere" which we know only in Europe and which this splendid country must have before we can justly be called the musical na-

Of course, given suitable climatic conditions, the military heliograph can transmit messages over enormous tracts of country, and the record is probably held by an Englishman, Captain Sadler of the Sixth Dragoon Guards, who, by this means, succeeded in South Africa in sending a message direct a distance of

LIGHTS FOR MOTORCYCLES.

The latest attachment for the ubiquitous motorcycle is a complete electric generating plant for lighting the headlight, similar to the ap paratus used in automobiles. Up to now the heavy weight of such installations has prevented their use on motorcycles, but a light system, consisting of a regulator and generator taking its power from the turning axle, has been perfected. The regulator keeps the voltage constant at varying speeds of the motorcycle. As a result of the new device the motorcycle of the future may be expected to cruise with its own electric lights, freed from the danger of batteries or carbide supply giving out.

JANKO KO KO KO KO KO KO KO

(Copyright, 1917, by W. G. Chapman.) Jerry Parks had taken notice of Vera. She "seen better days," and the repapers. We offer this unequalled membrance of them had made her careful to instill into the mind of her daughter the fact that she was not to allow herself to be patronized by the "cottage set." The bitterness of her own ostracism caused her to lay rather an undue stress on her advice. But Vera did not seem to even have to repel patronage, she was simply ignored by the social leaders. Still this did not in the least trouble her. The social swim was not with her a burning ambition, and she was too busy helping to run the house, and keep track of a Teddy, a particularly adventurous, small brother to have time to be unhappy.

When Jerry broached the subject of Vera's attractions to his mother, a fashionable matron of the exclusive set, she gave him such a hard, cold, emphatic settler on any attempt at social recognition in that quarter that the young man went off by himself to ponder over the prose and cons of the situation, and whether after all the so-called "best society" was not in need of "hurry call" treatment, and if transfusion of blood were not necessary for it's continued existence. Rebellion was rising in his soul, but his mother's teaching from the time he

It was through the small boys that Vera came to know more of Jerry Parks. He was especially popular with them all, and some of the stories about him that came to her ears made her think she would really like to know him better, even if he did belong to the "cottage set."

Teddy Carr was always promptly on hand for luncheon, so one day when he did not appear it was opined that something rather unusual was detaining him. Vera took the small rowboat, and started out to search. slightly sprained wrist made the handling of an oar rather painful, but she was not the sort to be kept back by a personal hurt, so she went on. It seemed quite useless for Vera to demur. He declared he was "first aid to the injured," and almost lifted her into the launch.

"I believe I know what those small sons of Belial are up to," he said after Vera was comfortably settled. "They have turned bold buccaneers, and are searching for treasure."
"I think," added Vera, "by what I gathered yesterday, it's buried treasure, and it's located on a desert island under a blasted oak."

"Oh, that's the wild adventure, is it?" he laughed. . "Well, then we'd better put in to the first island we find."

"Yes," said Vera, "that's what I thought of doing. It won't matter whether it's oak or pine trees, and their imagination will supply the 'blasted' part."

"I can supply the 'blasted' part without any imagination," remarked Jerry with some vexation. "Here's mother having a fit over the young pirate."

"Yes, my mother was beginning to be a bit anxious, but I told her I thought I could find him, and I hope she won't worry. I laughed so when I overheard that pirate scheme, I came pretty near being branded as a spy. Oh, I think the imagination of boys is lovely! I just wish they didn't lose

"But suppose," he said, "it should go on leading them on such a wild goose chase as this?"

"Men will be always led by imagination, and will always be going on wild goose chases. I only think that if they kept the boy's imagination they would go on finer quests."

Jerry stared wonderingly at the girl. Then he fell to thinking. She had said something that made him

They explored the two small islands quite thoroughly, but there was no trace of the bold buccaneers. Jerry, who wished to prolong his stay with Vera, was for starting on a still further cruise several miles away, but she suggested the boys might be home by this time, and they had better turn back. Jerry discovered his supply of gasoline was low, and reluctantly changed his course.

"I'm about starved, too, aren't you?" he asked.

"Well I think it must be about dinner time. Perhaps I can be 'first aid' this time. I put up a lunch for the boys, and if you'll reach for that bas-

Jerry reached for it, and they became more chummy than ever over the sandwiches which Jerry declared were the best he ever had in his life.

Much to their surprise they found on arriving the boys had not returned. Vera determined to start out alone to a spot they had not visited. She remembered a little rocky cove further down the shore on the mainland. She put up a light on the boat, and started out. Nearing the place she heard a well-kn wn voice raised in a cry of distress. A sorrier, more forlorn pair of pirates were never seen. They had clambered along the rocks to an isolated point, and the rising tide had cut them off from the shore just as they had concluded to try to swim for safety. Birch Parks had fallen on the slippery rocks, and either broken or put out of joint a bone in his ankle. It was so badly swollen Vera could not tell. With the help of Teddy he was lifted into the boat, groaning with the pain.

No one seemed to be at hand when they landed, and the Carr home being nearest, they carried him to the house and hastily informed the Parks

"Coals to Newcastle."

"To carry coals to Newcastle" means to do something that is superfluous. Newcastle being a great coal field, carrying coals there would be a type of unnecessary action. The French have a saying "to carry water to the river" for the same thing, and there are several Latin equivalents.

A. P. CROCKETT'S LATEST DEAL

Another Oil Lease Sold To New York Capitalists In Oklahoma.

Almost equaling the $1,000,600 oil lease sale made last summer by the Fortuna Oil company, news "leaked" out yesterday that the same company had sold 320 acres of oil leases near Yale to New York capitalists. The consideration this time was more than $800,000.

The sale was handled by A. P. Crockett, attorney of this city, and president of the Fortuna company. Mr. Crockett was responsible for the big sale of property last summer, which went to the Roxana company. The leasess old adjoin those bought by Roxana. Both sales were for acreage upon which there was no production.

The Fortuna company still retains several valuable leases in the same locality which were not sold because of pending litigation. The leases sold were on the Skeen, Miller, Myers, Brock and Caesor farms-Oklahoman.

THE ADAMSON LAW.

In passing upon the Adamson law the Supreme Court divided five to four. Those dissenting from the ed. Either as a law fixing wages or hours of labor, the court decided, congress had au-

The dissenting opinions-Justices vidual views and Justices Pitney and Vandeventer joining in one announcement-variously asserted that the Adamson act is void because beyond constitutional powers of congress, because it takes railroads' property without due process of law or because it is not an hours of labor statute or a legitimate legislation of commerce.

Justices Pitney and Vandeventer denied that congress had power to fix wages of common carriers' employes -a power upheld by the majority. Justice Day did not admit or deny such power, dissenting because, he said, the law illegally takes railroad revenues and gives them to the trainmen by "arbitrary, illegal congressional fiat."

The wage increase sustained dates back to Jan. 1, when the Adamson act was made effective. Railroads have been keeping account of the trainmen's wages due for prompt payment upon Monday's decision. The temporary wage increases are effective under the law until the Goethals commission reports, while the future wage scales under permanent eight hour day standard will await either private or congressional action after the report.

That the railroads will ask either congress or the Interstate Commerce commission to authorize rate increases to meet the increased wage cost entailed has been plainly indicated through all stages of the controversy.

The immediate effect of the decision will be to fix a permanent eight-hour basic day in computing wage scales on interstate railroads, for which a nation-wide strike has been threatened, and to give, effective from Jan. 1, 1917, increases in wages to trainmen of about 25 per cent. at a cost to Don't wait until the the railroads estimated at from $40, 000,000 to $50,000,000 a year.
